Clement's Kindness

A LITTLE KINDNESS CAN MAKE A BIG DIFFERENCE

2018 ANNUAL REPORT

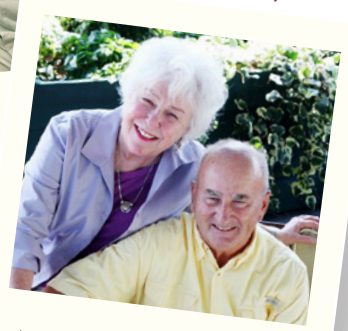

Over the last two years, it has been my honor and privilege to serve as Board Chair for Clement's Kindness. During this time both my husband, Knox, and I have been impressed by the level of involvement and commitment we have seen from so many. Clement's Kindness is blessed to have the support of our board members, donors, volunteers, patients and patient families. Perhaps the two groups that have really made an impact on Knox and I are the patients and their families who we are privileged to help and the young high schoolers and college students who gave their time, energy and enthusiasm to raise money for our cause. We saw patients and their families who, while going through the most difficult of times, gave back to Clement's Kindness in ways that brought tears to our eyes. We saw high schoolers and college students show tremendous enthusiasm, a willingness to work and a generosity of spirit that inspired us. Clement's Kindness has impacted thousands of people since its founding 15 years ago. Our goal always has been and always will be to help. With your continued support, we will work to ensure that Clement's Kindness continues to do just that.

HOW CLEMENT'S KINDNESS HELPS

Clement's Kindness Fund for the Children was established in 2002 at the Community Foundation of Greenville to address the medical, psychological, social, emotional and financial needs of Upstate families impacted by pediatric cancer and serious blood disorders.

The creation of Clement's Kindness was ironically a story of tragedy turned into hope and healing for many. Founders, Knox and Priscilla Haynsworth, tragically lost their son, Clement at the age of 24. To honor Clement's kind and gentle spirit, the Haynsworth's have made it their lives work to help these sick children in need.

Today, Clement's Kindness continues to serve the Upstate community through funding and support of the following hospitals:

Myleigh McDowell

Wilms Tumor | 8 years-old

"Myleigh is the sweetest, kindest, smartest kid you will ever meet," Robert McDowell says. "She's got the biggest loving heart."

As Myleigh's dad, Robert may be a bit biased, which he willingly admits. But her constant courage and positivity while she faces a life-threatening illness is nothing short of inspiring. "She's a warrior," he says.

In late 2017, Myleigh began experiencing continuous stomach pain. After multiple trips back and forth to the doctor with inconclusive results, Robert and her mother, Jessica, knew something was seriously wrong. On February 2, 2018, a hospital visit and a CT scan finally revealed the source of Myleigh's pain—an almost four pound tumor on her kidney. Immediately, her medical team started Myleigh on a treatment plan, beginning with surgery and chemotherapy.

While Myleigh's joyful spirit has been a source of encouragement for her parents and siblings, on harder days, special events organized by Clement's Kindness have provided a safe place for Myleigh to simply be an eight-year-old.

"She had an awesome time," Robert says of the trip to Carowinds and the All Off For Cancer event at Clemson. And it wasn't just Myleigh who enjoyed them, her four brothers were also able to participate, making these experiences more approachable for families and turning them into cherished memories. "Clement's Kindness is a great organization. They have given us so much joy to keep her going."

Ten months later, Myleigh has finished treatment and is cancer free. Through it all, she's continued to sing and dance—she loves belting out Carrie Underwood's "The Champion"—and maintained her faith in God's will. When she grows up, she wants to be a pediatric oncologist and help kids just like her fight cancer.

"Myleigh is writing a story. She's walking through this with her head held high. She's trusting God," her dad says. "She smiles through this whole process. It has made our family's faith stronger."

"Clement's Kindness has given us so much joy to keep her going." — Robert McDowell, Myleigh's father

Jack Williams

Leukemia | 4 years-old

When he slips into his Captain America costume, Jack Williams is pretty close to invincibility. His playful, boyish spirit certainly seems invincible, at least to his mom and dad, Mimi and John Williams.

"He never stops. He loves to run and is the only one who doesn't feel sorry for himself."

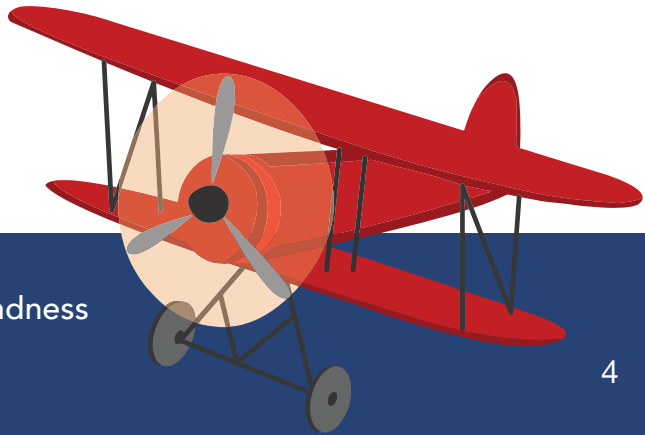

Four-year-old Jack's energy hasn't always seemed endless. When he was two, his parents noticed Jack appeared pale and extra tired, and was bruising easier than the other boys he played with. Then, one morning he woke up with an intense nose bleed that wouldn't clot and his parents knew something was wrong.

While being rushed to the ER that evening, Jack was very ill and needed blood transfusions and platelets. Tests revealed a high white blood cell count, eventually leading to a leukemia diagnosis, and Jack was hospitalized while he stabilized and began chemotherapy. When he finally returned home, life for Jack, his parents, and younger brother, Braeden, were drastically altered.

Cancer treatments weaken immune systems, which makes children vulnerable to normal infections. It's safer to keep them at home, away from the risk of outside germs, but it can be a difficult lifestyle adjustment for families. "Everyday colds and viruses have taken a toll on Jack's body," Mimi says. "We have to be so careful all the time to try to stay healthy and germ free."

This is one challenge Clement's Kindness seeks to tackle for families with a child battling illness. Through special, private and protected events like the Christmas Parade Viewing Party and the Clemson Football Game vs Syracuse Viewing, Jack and his family are able to enjoy fun outings while still keeping Jack safe.

The Williams family also received new tires for their truck and enjoyed the Carowinds trip through Clement's Kindness. Jack will finish his treatment in July of 2020, and his parents are looking forward to him starting kindergarten cancer free.

"It's hard because he can't be around other kids... This is one challenge Clement's Kindness seems to tackle for families." — Mimi Williams, Jack's mother

Summer Venable

Leukemia | 7 years-old

Not everyone gets to meet a famous college athlete. And not everyone gets to shave said athlete's head. But seven-year-old Summer Venable did both. As part of the All Off For Cancer event started by Clemson football star, Sean Pollard, kids battling blood disorders and cancer shaved the heads of Tiger athletes to raise funds for Clement's Kindness. According to her mom, Kelsey, Summer loved it.

"Usually she's so shy, but the athlete we got was so amazing, and they just clicked," Kelsey says. "He still texts me to catch up on her."

At five years old, Summer was diagnosed with leukemia. Kelsey had noticed she seemed abnormally pale, and her doctor ordered blood work for anemia. The clinic called them back on a weekend, even though they were closed, to tell the Venables to take Summer straight to the children's cancer hospital for a bone marrow biopsy.

Summer's treatment started in Philadelphia, but when the Venables moved to Simpsonville to be closer to family, they transitioned to the BI-LO Charities Children's Cancer Center. Here, Summer received her chemotherapy in the Knox and Priscilla Haynsworth Day Hospital, renovated and upfitted in 2015 by Clement's Kindness with new infusion chairs, décor, a built-in fish tank, and distraction technologies such as tablets, TVs and headphones. Summer's family was thankful for a comfortable setting for her treatments.

As of July 2018, Summer is in remission. She still visits the hospital for check-ups, but these days, her mom says she enjoys playing dress-up and doing gymnastics. Through Clement's Kindness, the Venables were also able to go to Carowinds, where Summer unveiled her inner thrill seeker. For Kelsey, if it wasn't for organizations like Clement's Kindness, they wouldn't be able to experience such unique opportunities.

"We are thankful for the comfortable setting for Summer's treatments"
— Kelsey Venable, Summer's mother

Makayla Freeman

Sickle Cell Anemia | 7-years old

Makayla Freeman will battle sickle cell anemia her entire life. It's a blood disease, one that's diagnosed at birth, and causes chronic pain, fatigue, and sensitivities to everyday occurrences like temperature changes and dehydration. Hope Freeman, Makayla's mom, understands exactly what her daughter is going through. Hope also has sickle cell, and both she and Makayla face a lifetime of pain management and hospital stays.

"As a person with sickle cell, you learn early on you have to be strong," Hope says. "You can be running and playing, and at the drop of a dime be in excruciating pain."

But they're not without support. Through Clement's Kindness, Hope and Makayla not only have help with their battle against chronic pain, they have advocates who can educate others on the difficulties they experience.

Through the School Intervention Program (SIP) funded by Clement's Kindness, Makayla's care team was able to meet with her teachers, school nurses, and counselors to explain the nuances of her needs—like letting her drink as much water as she needs, and consequently allowing her to use the bathroom more than others. "It made a big difference," Hope says. Explaining it to others can be hard.

This year, Makayla became eligible to attend Camp Courage, and according to Hope, she did not want to come home. Not only was she surrounded by kids just like her, she was also able to go swimming.

Clement's Kindness has provided financial assistance for repairs to the family car, rent and a power bill. The new Sickle Cell Support Group will be valuable to both Makayla and her mom, as they continue learning management for the disease.

It's the small details like these that Hope genuinely appreciates. "Clement's Kindness thinks about every detail. It's a great feeling to know that somebody cares."

Despite the illness they fight against, Makayla and Hope do what they can to maintain quality of life. Makayla is full of seven-year-old joy, and on a given day, she'll be riding her bike, dressing up as a princess, or playing in the park. Through the ups and the downs, Hope is thankful to have a good support system behind them both.

"Clement's Kindness thinks about every detail. It's a great feeling to know that somebody cares." — Hope Freeman, Makayla's mother

Gianna Tanfulla

Langerhan's Cell Histiocytosis | 3 years-old

As a parent of a child battling a chronic illness, it can be difficult to know how to care for them best. Simple decisions, like taking them to the grocery store, can be agonizing, as exposure to germs can cause sickness or hospitalization.

When their daughter Gianna was diagnosed with Langerhan's cell histiocytosis in 2016, Stefano and Genna Tanfulla were floored. Just 20 months old, Gianna had been bleeding out of her right ear on and off for several months. Her doctor thought it was an ear infection, but low iron from a blood test, along with a rash on her back, caused them concern. A CT scan soon revealed multiple lesions, and a bone marrow biopsy came back positive. Within a few days, Gianna had a port installed and started treatment.

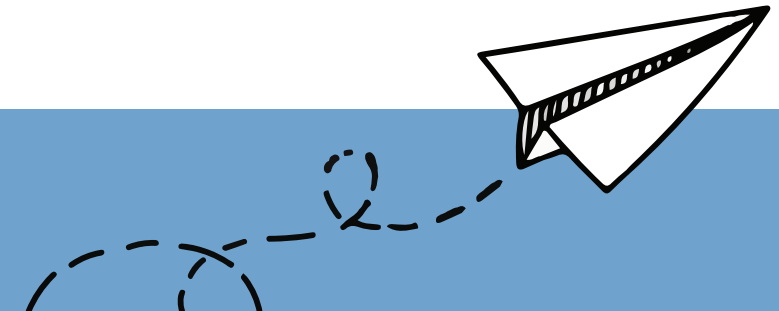

"It was instantaneous results," Stefano says. Her ear stopped bleeding as soon as she started chemotherapy, but with chemo came a weakened immune system, and the Tanfulla's kept her in a bubble. "It's hard having two littles," says Genna, referring to Gianna and her brother, Luca. "Any time she has a fever, she's in the hospital for days."

Gianna's treatment lasted a year, and when she finished in April, her scans were clear. But just a few short months later, a checkup revealed that the LCH had returned.

This time, Gianna's medical team suggested a different approach. Instead of keeping her quarantined, the Tanfulla's and her doctors agreed to let Gianna experience life as normal a three-year-old. She's now a ballerina, taking lessons every week, and attends Pre-K when she can. If her counts are low, Gianna stays home.

The second round of treatment has been an adjustment, but Genna explains the connections they've made through Clement's Kindness have been a source of encouragement. "We're thankful for the other families we've met along the way," Genna says. Gianna was able to watch the Christmas parade from a safe place with kids just like her and attend the All Off For Cancer event, which included a tour of the Clemson football stadium.

"Just knowing that support is there, that means a lot . . . the feeling that you're not alone," Genna adds. Gianna's treatment is scheduled to end August 2019.

"We're thankful for the families we've met along the way."
— Genna Tanfulla, Gianna's mother

Hannah Leonhardt

Leukemia | 18 years-old

As an eighth-grader, it's hard to imagine anything worse than spending Spring Break sick in bed. When Hannah Leonhardt's much anticipated break arrived, she started having intense bone pain, along with a persistent cough. Her mom, Dawn, noticed she was pale, which continued for the entire week. When she didn't respond to normal treatment, Hannah's medical team sent her to BI-LO Charities Children's Cancer Center, where tests revealed leukemia.

Hannah's now a senior in high school and has been cancer free since December 2017. But her journey's been a long one. Hannah has spent hundreds of days in the hospital, not just for cancer treatment, but also for avascular necrosis, a detrimental side effect of chemotherapy that depletes blood supply to bone tissue. As a 18-year-old, Hannah has already had two hip replacements and is in physical therapy for her shoulders as well.

While the physical aspect of illness is a constant struggle, Dawn points out the emotional pain of isolation also takes a toll. "It's hard to be hospitalized as a teenager," Dawn explains of Hannah's journey. "Your friends move on with their lives."

It's one reason why Dawn, and Hannah, are thankful for Clement's Kindness. Through their partnership with Camp Courage, Hannah was able to connect with other teenagers who understood the pain and isolation. The relationships that took hold there have blossomed, and they still attend events sponsored by Clement's Kindness including bowling outings and Christmas parties. Dawn credits these friendships with carrying Hannah through high school, ever appreciative of those who made the Camp Courage experience possible for Hannah.

"When people give to Clement's Kindness, it means someone cared enough to pay for that experience," she says. "It gives you a glimmer of hope and that hope gives you strength and courage to get up and get through the next day."

Hannah will graduate from Greer Middle College in May and will attend USC Upstate in the fall. She would like to become a pediatric oncologist, hoping to provide the same care and support that was given to her during her journey. And if Hannah's experiences are an indicator, she's well placed to provide physical and emotional healing in the lives of those she touches.

"When people give to Clement's Kindness, it means someone cared enough to pay for that experience... It gives you a glimmer of hope." — Dawn Leonhardt, Hannah's mother

RUNWAY CAFE
AT GREENVILLE MUNICIPAL AIRPORT
HOSTS CLEMENT'S KINDNESS

On a cool October day, families of the BI-LO Charities Children's Cancer Center arrived at the Runway Cafe at the Greenville Municipal Airport. After gathering in the hanger connected to the Runway Cafe to warm up, the kids quickly crafted paper airplanes for a flight throwing competition.

The families were especially excited to tour an aircraft, giving each child a big grin as they climbed inside to take their turn as Captain. The two large playground areas and views of planes landing and taking off quickly gained their attention, and they spent the rest of the morning swinging, climbing and sliding. The day concluded with a lunch catered by Runway Cafe in the hanger, leaving families with both their bellies and hearts a little fuller.

Clement's Kindness is extremely grateful to the Runway Cafe and Park at GMU for planning such a special day for a few of our families from the BI-LO Charities Children's Cancer Center.

To learn more or book your party at the Runway Park, visit greenvilledowntownairport.com.

CAMP COURAGE

A Special Place For Courageous Kids

CAMP COURAGE

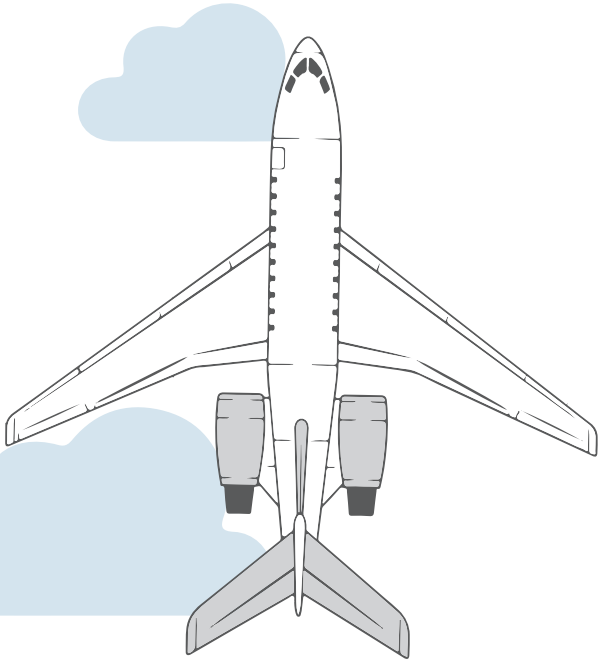

Every June and August, patients of the BI-LO Charities Children's Cancer Center spend a week at Camp Courage designed to promote normal development, coping and peer support, as well as recreation. Clement's Kindness has made this possible with the funding of six cabins and an infirmary on-site. We are also always delighted to spend some quality time with the campers and take part in some of the camp activities.

SUPPORT GROUPS

Clement's Kindness funds three vital support groups at the BI-LO Charities Children's Cancer Center. These support groups allow the hospital to better provide the extent of care children and their families need at this challenging time.

Survivorship Clinic

This support group provides an opportunity for childhood cancer survivors to attend a survivorship clinic once a year, focusing on medical and psychosocial needs as they relate to the therapies received to treat each patient's cancer.

- Special attention to medical surveillance testing and procedures are reviewed and tailored to each survivor's plan for their visit
- Provides educational information regarding potential late effects that may be associated with their previous therapies.
- Visit with a social worker or psychologist for psychosocial assessments for care plan
- Review of treatment plan prior to clinic for development of a treatment summary that is shared with the patient
- Coordination of labs/testing to decrease duplicative lab work from multiple care teams

Sickle Cell Clinic

Sickle Cell Disease (SCD) is a chronic, often debilitating, disorder of the red blood cell hemoglobin structure that results in multi-system organ damage through the blockage of blood flow in small and large vessels. Through this group, monthly dinners allow families to connect with each other and hear from a speaker to learn valuable information on management of the disease. In 2019, a weekend retreat is planned for the spring.

Someone to Always Remember Bereavement Program (STAR)

Led by Reverend Patrick Jinks, the STAR Bereavement Program is a support group for families who have experienced the loss of a child. Monthly meetings are designed to help families learn how to cope with the change in family structure, size and loss.

HOLIDAY EVENTS

The holidays should be a time for festivities and fellowship, and Clement's Kindness makes sure to provide several opportunities for families at the BI-LO Charities Children's Cancer Center to celebrate, adding a little extra cheer to the holiday season.

Teen Christmas Party

The teens celebrated the holidays with dinner at Fried Green Tomatoes and ornament decorating.

Christmas Parade Viewing Party at ONE

During the downtown Greenville Christmas parade, Clement's Kindness hosted a party for patients 12 and under and their families. Families also enjoyed watching the parade from the large windows of the second-story main street building. The party featured games, crafts, balloon art, a face painter as well as a special visit from Christmas characters.

STAR Dinner

Families from the STAR Bereavement program enjoyed a holiday meal and a visit from Santa, and were able to celebrate and honor the family members lost.

Santa's Workshop

Patients of the BI-LO Charities Children's Cancer Center and their siblings were able to pick out a toy donated by Clement's Kindness at appointments at the Cancer Center during the two weeks leading up to Christmas.

CLEMENT'S KINDNESS ♥'s

All Off for Cancer

Offensive Lineman, Sean Pollard, held the 2nd Annual All Off for Cancer event at the Clemson University football facility in July to raise funds and awareness for Clement's Kindness. Fifteen athletes volunteered to have their heads shaved by the pediatric cancer patients, and the event raised more than $12,000.

CLEMSON

Clemson Events

Clement's Kindness patients and families attended a pre-season practice in August where they were able to interact with players and coaches and received autographed footballs.

In September, Clemson Cheerleaders hosted a Clement's Kindness viewing party for the Clemson vs. Syracuse football game. Patients and families were invited to their cheer clinic, participated in Tiger Walk, visited Howard's Rock and walked on the field during warm-ups. Then the group enjoyed watching the game inside Littlejohn Coliseum which provided a safe environment for the patients.

The Women's Basketball team hosted Clement's Kindness in November to their Pediatric Cancer Awareness Game. After an exciting game, patients were able to meet the players and ask for autographs.

Throughout 2018, several Clemson University athletes visited patients at the hospital to brighten their spirits during treatments and hospital stays.

WADE HAMPTON HIGH SCHOOL SPIRIT WEEK

Wade Hampton High School Student Council selected Clement's Kindness as their 2018 Spirit Week beneficiary. The school held many events throughout the week, and Clement's Kindness and several patients from the BI-LO Charities Children's Cancer Center were thrilled to take part in several of the activities. A few of the most exciting events were the color run, date auction and dodge ball competition. The school raised more than $306,000, and we are very thankful for their support, dedication and help to spread awareness in the community about our organization.

LEGACY GIVING

Why Create a Legacy Giving Plan?

As supporters of Clement's Kindness, you undoubtedly understand the value of donating your time and resources to this organization. Every gift, regardless of the amount, has a tremendous impact on the lives of families dealing with the effects of a child with cancer or serious blood disorder. A lifetime of support not only impacts current families, but also provides for the longevity of the organization so that it can continue to serve families in our communities in the future.

I have seen the direct and immediate impact Clement's Kindness has on families, and I'm passionate about the unique role Clement's Kindness plays upon a diagnosis, treatment, recovery and beyond.

My family has been excited about the support we've been able to offer through our annual donations, and it is important to us to make sure that we could continue our support even if we aren't here to make our annual gifts. For that reason, we designated a planned gift to Clement's Kindness in our estate plan.

Planned gifts are a way to ensure that the people and organizations you found worthy of supporting while you were alive can still benefit from your support in the future. Every planned gift, regardless of the size, creates a lasting legacy of support for those who need it most.

-Matthew A. Miller

As you've seen, the needs are many, but so are the opportunities to help.

Clement's Kindness would love to share with you how your support is making a difference in the lives of these families. Please be sure to provide your email address with your donation in order for us to keep you updated!
